Kaplan Excels at Finding Solutions in Complex Cases

Wisconsin Law Journal

When Benjamin Kaplan gets a new case, he looks at it as a puzzle and immediately begins developing a plan that he believes will lead to the best solution.

“It is all about getting your client to where he wants to be,” said Kaplan, an associate in Michael Best & Friedrich’s litigation practice in Milwaukee.

Specializing in commercial litigation, Kaplan works with defendants in a variety of class-action cases dealing with matters ranging from wage-and-hour to consumer complaints.

“These cases have very high stakes and your work needs to be very nuanced and detail orientated,” he said. “Class-action cases add more complexity to the puzzle.”
